complex patterns of nodes and links Designer, writer, and researcher, Manuel Lima first called this trend “networkism” in his book Visual Complexity: Mapping Patterns of Information According to Lima, this trend is inspired by “rhizomatic properties like nonlinearity, multiplicity, or interconnectedness, and scientific advances in areas such

Symbol Considerations for Bivariate Thematic Mapping

the benefit of bivariate mapping, comprehensibility is the cost A bivariate map is, by its nature, more visually complex than a univariate map Visual complexity, as defined by MacEachren (1982a; 1982b), describes the degree of intricacy created by the map elements Visual complexity makes the map more difficult for the viewer to

EVERY ALGORITHM HAS ART IN IT - CPNAS

In his book, “Visual Complexity: Mapping Patterns of Information”, Manuel Lima coins the term networkism which he defines as “a small but growing artistic trend, characterized by the portrayal of figurative graph structures- illustrations of network topologies revealing convoluted patterns of ...

distinct patterns of activation in the human cortex First, at the category level, multivariate mapping found extensive sensitivity throughout the ventral cortex for words relative to false-font strings Secondly, at the identity level, the multi-voxel pattern categories are comparable in terms of visual complexity as Visual complexity in orthographic learning: Modeling ...

The visual complexity of orthographies varies across writing systems Prior research has shown that complexity strongly influences the initial stage of reading development: the perceptual learning of grapheme forms This study presents a computational simulation that examines the degree to which visual complexity leads to grapheme learning Visual Features That Convey Meaning in Graphic Symbols: A ...

complexity, and thus has not established mapping between the referent and the word, He found patterns among the visual elements used to convey the underlying semantic content of graphic representations To optimize the effectiveness of communication through graphics, Horn
